WHAT IS NORMAL EATING ?

Normal eating is:

- being able to eat when you are hungry and continue eating until you are satisfied
- it is being able to choose food you like and eat it and truly get enough of it – not just stop eating because you think you should
- being able to use some moderate constraint on your food selection to get the right food, but not being so restrictive that you miss out on pleasurable foods
- giving yourself permission to eat sometimes because you are happy, sad or bored, or just because it feels good
- three meals a day or it can be choosing to munch along, leaving some cookies on the plate because you know you can have some again tomorrow, or it is eating more now because they taste so wonderful when they are fresh
- over-eating at times, feeling stuffed and uncomfortable
- under-eating at times and wishing you had more
- trusting your body to make up for your mistakes in eating

Normal eating takes up some of your time and attention, but keeps its place as only one important area of your life.

In short, normal eating is being flexible. It varies in response to your emotions, your schedule, your hunger, and your proximity to food.
